- 9. Vehicles which source observed with the regiment included about 15 three-ton CEG trucks, 5 or 6 Raba and Gsepel trucks, 7 or 8 Dodge trucks and 2 or 3 GAZ sedans.
- 10. Most of the enlisted personnel serving with the regiment were inducted on 20 October 1950 and about half were of the 1929 class while the other half were of the 1930 class. Senior enlisted men belonged primarily to the 1927 and 1928 classes. Despite persistent rumors that the period of active service was only two years, there were several soldiers who had been inducted as early as April 1949 and were still waiting for their discharge. About 90 percent of the enlisted personnel of the 2d Battery, which included three volunteers, came from the Sopron (F 48/X 63) area. Seven men of the battery were card-carrying Communists and two were Communist Party candidates.

 About 80 percent of the enlisted personnel seemed to be anti-Communistic. Clothing was good and food was ample. (3)
- The recruits who were inducted on 20 October 1950, went through six weeks of basic training, followed by special training which was usually held for the specialists from all batteries at one a time. For example, the reconnaissance training included six sections from the batteries of both battalions and sections from the battalion headquarters and the regimental headquarters. The reconnaismance sections practiced orientation marches, reconnaissance of gen emplacements and following an azimuth course, twice a week in the vicinity of Pudapest. Each member of the recommaissance sections carried a map in the scale of 1:50,000 and a Bezard compass. The range-finder sections were trained together with the range-finder sections of another medium AMA regiment stationed in the borough of Budafok. The training took place near the barracks installation of a light ANA regiment at Budapest-Ferihegy airfield. All radio and telephone sections of the regiment were trained collectively, while the fire control personnel and the gun crews were trained at battery level. The personnel of the 2d Pattery perfected moving into firing position from the line of march within less than one minute. The radio directionfinder sections received no training because there was no equipment available. All batteries went to the Makosi drill ground once a week for drill, gasdefense training and practice with infantry weapons. (4)
- 12. Between 2 March and 18 June 1951, three major exercises at regimental level were held. The first, which took place in late March, was designed as a practice movement by rail, with the entraining and detraining taking place at a railroad station in Ujpest. In the second exercise conducted in the area east of Budakalasz (Q 48/H 53) from 15 to 17 bay, the regiment moved by road to a bivouac site, occupied gum positions and practiced aiming at a Hungarian military aircraft of type DC-3. The third exercise was held in the Fot (Q 48/H 63)-Csomad (Q 48/H 64)-Oerszentmiklos (Q 48/H 74) area during one week in early June. Source learned from conversations that the exercise was designed primarily for the training of battery commanders. During the exercise, the 2d Battery was to protect the Csomad railroad station against air attack. The exercise also included record firing with infantry weapons. The political NCO of the 2d Rattery told of an order requiring all political officers and enlisted men holding political assignments to be experts in the firing of pistols and submachine guns in order not to lose their special status. During the week of the exercise, the special service unit of the lot Bn arranged for a wellattended night of entertainment in order that soldiers and civilians mightbecome acquainted. During a meeting for officers and MCOs in early June 1951 it was announced that the entire regiment would move to Nagyoroszi (Q 49/H 68) for record firing from 20 June to 20 September. A large number of reservists were to be inducted for this training period. About half of the 85-mm shells stored in the Matyas Barracks were shipped to Hagyoroszi as early as the beginning of June. Personnel of the light AAA regiment in Budapest-Ferihegy arrived to guard the installations of the 2d Pattery.
